2008 AALL Annual Conference - Portland, Oregon
Energize ● Explore ● Evolve
Add another E…I’m Exhausted!

Whew! The Annual Conference was extremely tiring, but well worth the trip. Portland is an amazing city with gorgeous views, beautiful weather and a fantastic rail system!

Saturday was an all day session of leadership training, which started with almost 25 chapter presidents or vice presidents in attendance! However, that number dwindled to about 10 by the final session, which was the Council of Chapter Presidents meeting. The day was spent conversing with other members, learning about chapter responsibilities and AALL resources and meeting several AALL committee chairs.

The three day conference schedule is unbelievably jam-packed with activities. I attended the LEXIS and Westlaw events, AALL General Business Meeting, PLL-SIS Business Meeting and Luncheon, user-groups and a wide variety of programs on topics such as cataloging, beer, citation, vendor relations, CI and patents. I also toured the Portland office of Perkins Coie. Oh my, I can’t forget to mention the gigantic Exhibit Hall!

Throughout most of the sessions and business meetings, AALL continued to mention their website. They are really pushing the Speakers Directory, AALL Calendar and Continuing Education programs. The CE programs are in the Members Only section and there are many interesting video and audio programs available. I really encourage everyone to take a look at the site, http://www.aallnet.org/index.asp

My favorite part of the conference is networking with other LLAW members. The conference is a great venue to finally have a chance to sit and talk with each other. Often we are rushing back to work, or rushing home after work and we don’t have the time to get past brief pleasantries. It is great to be able to immediately collaborate and share what you’ve learned with co-workers or to talk about the great time you had at the Oregon coast. In the midst of all the conference chaos, we did manage to squeeze in a little LLAW get-together on Monday night and a good time was had by all! Thank you so much to LLAW for the grant and the opportunity to attend the conference.

So, summer is over and fall is on the way. It is time for school and football season. Wait, what?! Football! But the Brewers are still winning! It was actually nice to be in Portland and miss at least some of the media frenzy whipped up by Brett Favre. Either way, I am extremely excited for the next few months. We have our first membership meeting at WisconsinEye, new library school students to recruit, the Unsung Hero Awards, the LLAW calendar and just a few sporting events! Hope to see everyone at the membership meeting.

Go Brewers! Go Packers! Go Badgers! Go Marquette! Go Panthers! Go Aaron Rodgers! Go Kyle Busch!

Ellen Birschel has joined Reinhart Boerner Van Deuren as an Information Specialist. She is currently working on her MLIS from the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana.

Bev Butula, Davis & Kuelthau,
- published “Online Options for Researching Attorneys” in the August 11, 2008 issue of the Wisconsin Law Journal, page 12A.
- spoke to the Milwaukee Litigation Paralegal Luncheon on August 13, 2008. Sponsored by Midwest Paralegal Services, the luncheon topic was “Blogs, Feeds and Other Web 2.0 Technologies.”
- presented “50 Sites in 60 Minutes” to the Milwaukee Chapter of International Association of Administrative Professionals on September 9, 2008.

Mary Koshollek, Godfrey & Kahn, shared her insights on the featured databases and was quoted in Jane Pribek’s article "Four legal research companies offer mid-priced options" in the September 1, 2008 issue of the Wisconsin Law Journal, page 9A.

Laura La Rose, Reinhart Boerner Van Deuren, has been accepted as one of 35 people to the AALL Leadership Program. This first annual Leadership Program is designed to provide contemporary, cutting-edge leadership training to build leaders and promote leadership in your organization and the profession.

Ted Potter, University of Iowa Law Library; Mary Koshollek, Godfrey & Kahn; Bill Ebbott and Sunil Rao, UW Law Library; and Jane Colwin, Wisconsin State Law Library, published Legal Research in Wisconsin, W.S. Hein Co. See related article on p. 7.

Carol Schmitt, Boardman Law Firm:
- will participate in a panel discussion for MAPA (Madison Area Paralegal Association) new paralegal student orientation at MATC on September 24, 2008. She will talk about law librarians, firms and paralegals.
- has been appointed to the AALL Public Relations Committee, for the term July 2008 through July 2010.

Bonnie Shucha, University of Wisconsin Law Library, along with Debbie Ginsberg and Meg Kribble, organized the AALL Computing Services Special Interest Section’s Web 2.0 Challenge. It was a free, comprehensive, and interactive online course using hands-on exercises to introduce law librarians to many kinds of social technologies in just five weeks. Several LLAW members participated in the course. As a facilitator for the Challenge, Bev Butula would like to thank Bonnie, Debbie, Meg and the teachers for an excellent program. A lot of effort was put into this course and I know everyone in my group loved it!

Please Welcome Our New Associate Members:

Nancy Bauman, Wisconsin Reference & Loan Library, processes serial and legal interlibrary loan requests. She will soon be ending her additional part-time work on a serials retrospective conversion project at UW-Madison, catalog department. She enjoys the university and is impressed with the campus and with the people she has met.

Dee Birschel, is Senior Director of Information Services and Publications at the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans, Brookfield, WI. IFEBP is a non-profit association focused on education and information for those working in benefits, compensation, HR and financial literacy. Six Information Specialists respond to research requests from the 35,000 members of IFEBP and are well known in the SLA community.

We welcome Nancy Scibelli to the Newsletter team. Nancy will be contributing articles on select online database features. Her first column appears below.

Many thanks to all members who continue to send us articles, features and photographs.

West’s CiteAdvisor
Nancy Scibelli, Quarles & Brady

As part of the process of creating legal documents, attorneys and legal staff manually check citation formats and create tables of authorities. Westlaw's CiteAdvisor is a productivity tool that automates this process.

CiteAdvisor is composed of two modules, the Citation Format Advisor and the Tables of Authorities Builder. The components can be run simultaneously or individually depending on the user's needs.

The Citation Format Advisor checks the format of citations within the document and makes suggestions based upon user-defined criteria. Users can configure CiteAdvisor to format citations in Bluebook format, ALWD Citation Manual format or according format rules for California, New York, Illinois, Florida and Texas. CiteAdvisor works through the document beginning to end checking each citation. As the tool checks the format of each citation, it prompts the user to accept the suggested citation format or to ignore CiteAdvisor's suggestion, giving the end-user full control of the final citation format.

The Table of Authorities Builder creates a table of authorities from the citations within the document text according to user-defined criteria. The user can customize the format according to personal or court-dictated preferences. For example, the source name may be underlined or italicized depending upon user preferences. The Table of Authorities Builder also allows users to choose where the table should appear within the document.

After running the document through CiteAdvisor, users can download a copy of the revised document which maintains the integrity of the original document. In addition, users can download a highlighted version of the document to view which citations were corrected and which CiteAdvisor citation suggestions the user ignored.

CiteAdvisor is billed on a transactional basis. The Citation Format Advisor costs $45/document; the Table of Authorities Builder costs $45/document; and the Citation Format Advisor and the Table of Authorities Builder used simultaneously cost $79/document. CiteAdvisor is also available on a subscription basis.

CiteAdvisor is available to Westlaw users at http://citeadvisor.westlaw.com.

Congratulations Connie!

LLAW Members Co-Author Legal Research Book
Connie Von Der Heide, Wisconsin State Law Library

The W.S. Hein Co. recently announced the publication of Legal Research in Wisconsin, 2nd edition. Authors are Ted Potter, University of Iowa Law Library and formerly at Marquette Law Library (lead author); Mary Koshollek, Godfrey & Kahn; Bill Ebbott and Sunil Rao, UW Law Library; and Jane Colwin, Wisconsin State Law Library.

The first edition was written by Richard A. Danner and published by the University of Wisconsin Extension Law Department back in 1980. The State Law Library has five copies, all of which are well worn from high use. The publisher’s abstract for the 2nd edition states: “This new edition continues to offer a comprehensive reference tool about legal research in Wisconsin. It revises and updates chapters and also expands them to include electronic tools and other new sources. Basic research tools are discussed with an eye toward showing their best uses in locating useful information. It remains a guide for attorneys, judges, paralegals, law librarians, students and others needing ready access to information contained in Wisconsin legal materials.”

When I talked with Jane about the publication of the new edition, she said, "We all put in a lot of work - especially Ted!" The authors will donate all royalties from the sale of this book to LLAW.

Congratulations and Thank you Ted, Mary, Bill, Sunil and Jane!

AALL in Portland
Amy Thornton, Stafford Rosenbaum LLP

Thank you to LLAW for providing me with financial support to attend the American Association of Law Libraries annual meeting in Portland in July. I have been a law librarian for over six years, but this was my first time attending AALL’s annual meeting. There were over 1,900 attendees making the meeting in Portland one of the most highly attended in recent years. “Energize * Explore * Evolve” was the theme of this year’s meeting.

Energize. There were 66 programs and 25 special interest section offerings to choose from at the meeting. AALL and vendors sponsor an array of social activities to network with colleagues. Talking with law librarians from around the country, learning about best practices and new ideas left me feeling recharged, enthusiastic and energized about law librarianship.

Explore. Along with the opportunity to explore a variety of programs at the Annual Meeting, I also took the opportunity to explore the Portland area. On Saturday, my husband and I rented a car and drove 90 miles east of Portland to Ecola State Park. Ecola State Park (pictured above) is on the Pacific Ocean and has a lovely sandy beach and miles of hiking trails. We then drove back through Portland and headed east to drive the 60 miles to Mount Hood. Mount Hood has year-round snowboarding and skiing so when we stopped in Government Camp (a small community that is a gateway to several ski resorts) it was bustling with teenagers attending snowboarding/ski camp. We returned our rented Subaru Outback with over 300 fresh miles on it and a great appreciation for the natural beauty of Oregon. While not at the meeting, I visited many of Portland’s attractions (the Japanese Garden, the International Rose Test Garden, Washington Park, Hoyt Arboretum, Powell’s Books) using the outstanding public transportation system.

Evolve. The number of programs and diversity of topics – from “Flashlights, FOIA and Advocacy: Tools for the Explorer in Search of Disappearing and Restricted Federal Documents” to “Beer and the Law” – offered the opportunity to learn about an array of subjects. My schedule was mostly filled with learning opportunities targeted at solo librarians or law firm librarians. The presenters of “Evolving Fair Use Policies in the Private Law Firm” gave the topic a lively turn by holding a fair use quiz show. It was a great way to present the topic and a useful refresher on fair use. The programs “Strategic Plans That Work” and “Educating the ‘C’ People: Engage Your Decision Makers and Help Them to Evolve” helped me step outside my day-to-day mindset and remember to look at the bigger picture. I returned to Wisconsin with program handouts and my notes that included new ideas and different ways to approach things at my firm.

My experience at the meeting made me realize the value of participating in professional development activities to keep current and stay enthusiastic and energized about law librarianship. Next year’s conference will be held July 25-28 in Washington D.C. The theme of the 2009 Annual Meeting is “Innovate” and AALL President James Duggan says the theme “captures the innovative spirit of law librarianship and our members. We work in a constantly changing profession, and we must continually innovate to cope with flat budgets, increased workloads, and other challenges.” I encourage LLAW members to apply for a LLAW grant to attend AALL’s 2009 annual meeting.

This article reviews social networking sites specifically designed for the legal profession, including Legal OnRamp (www.legalonramp.com), LawLink (www.lawlink.com), Pivotal-Discovery.com (www.pivotaldiscovery.com), and the internationally-focused Lawyrs.net (www.lawyrs.net).

Babb, Nancy. “A Collaborative Web: the law library website as a tool for cross-departmental technical and public services collaboration and cooperation.”

The author suggests a number of ways to improve PowerPoint presentations, such as not using the templates that come with the program, avoiding too much text, and adding animation.

Prof. Bell argues that copyright more closely resembles a privilege than it does a right. Though copyright has some property-like attributes, it can claim none of them without qualification. Treating copyright as a privilege will help balance copyright policy.

This article discusses two current trends: widespread online copyright infringement and the increasing number of authors who choose to distribute their works freely on the Internet. It discusses how copyright policy should adapt to these developments.

Besek, June M. and Loengard, Philippa S. “Maintaining the Integrity of Digital Archives.”
Columbia Journal of Law & the Arts 31:267-353 (Spring 2008)

The authors report on a study to determine how digital archives can best be structured to avoid the removal of documents from their collections. They conclude with fourteen recommendations to reduce the risk of digital document disappearance.

Bohannan, Christina. “Copyright Harm, Foreseeability, and Fair Use.”

Prof. Bohannan argues that copyright harm should focus on harm in fact, requiring proof or a meaningful likelihood that the defendant’s use supplanted the plaintiff’s sales or licensing revenues, and that this approach to fair use would effectively serve copyright’s purpose of promoting creativity.

Butula, Bev. “Online Options for Researching Attorneys.”

Researching attorneys may be helpful in the hiring process, when evaluating potential co-counsel or opposing counsel, etc. This article outlines a few online options for conducting this type of background check.

Cate, Fred H. “Government Data Mining: The Need for a Legal Framework.”

This article examines some of the critical issues surrounding the government’s collection and use of personal data for data mining, especially for law enforcement and national security purposes.

This article explores the evolution of both the U.S. copyright system and the moral rights regime in Europe. It seeks to identify and highlight the moral rights that are already part of U.S. law, and argues that explicit recognition and adoption of moral rights will improve U.S. copyright protection.

Cohen, Alan. “Competitive Advantage.”

Business intelligence is reshaping the role of law firm librarians.

This case note focuses on the federal district court case Field v. Google. The author argues that the court correctly decided the issue and that its analysis of implied licenses and the transformative nature of search engines will open the way for the growth of major initiatives such as the Google Library Project.

Cotter, Thomas F. “Fair Use and Copyright Overenforcement.”

The author argues that would-be users of copyrighted works under the fair use doctrine are often deterred by the uncertainty and unpredictability of the fair use doctrine itself, fearing that they possibly could be accused of infringement. He then discusses the likely effectiveness of six different types of fair use reforms.

Cotter, Thomas F. “Toward a Functional Definition of Publication in Copyright Law.”

With the growth of the Internet, the concept of publication has taken on new significance. This article attempts to reconcile various definitions of “publication” and to suggest a new way of thinking about publication that would enable courts to apply different criteria in different contexts.

“The Death or Rebirth of the Copyright?” Moderator: Hugh C. Hansen; panelists: Diane Zimmerman, Robert Kasunic, and Brett Frischmann.
In this symposium transcript, the panelists discuss whether new business models driven by technology will be the end of copyright.

The first in a three-part discussion of copyright issues surrounding user-generated content (UGC), this article focuses on whether UGC is copyrightable by considering whether it is original, whether it is a work of authorship, and whether it is fixed in a tangible medium of expression.

A Seattle law firm librarian describes a practical training and orientation model that offers seven steps to supplementing new attorney’s legal research skills.

Karjala, Dennis S. “Copyright and Creativity.” UCLA Entertainment Law Review 15:169-201 (Summer 2008)

In Feist Publications, Inc. v. Rural Telephone Service Co. the Supreme Court concluded that creativity is a necessary condition for copyright protection. The author discusses various problems resulting from that approach.

The author examines some of the newer U.S. copyright statutes and their related successful and unsuccessful legal challenges. In addition to issues relating to the merits of the claims, he addresses copyright law harmonization issues, and proposes a statutory amendment aimed at mitigating copyright conflicts between the U.S. and the E.U. at the World Trade Organization.

Lapachet, manager of library services at San Francisco-based Coblentz, Patch, Duffy & Bass, discusses the importance of law firm libraries in bringing in new clients through business development plans.

The author argues that granting property rights to authors rather than copyright owners would create a... market for literary and artistic works that would encourage authorship and creativity.

LLRX (June 1, 2008) http://www.llrx.com/features/ciguide.htm

Willamette Law Review 44:723-760 (Summer 2008)

This article argues that courts should uniformly treat unpublished opinions with deference, and that without such a uniform rule, attorneys face real ethical challenges in giving competent, diligent, and effective assistance of counsel.

Law Practice 34(4):24-26 (June 2008)

PowerPoint has been criticized as a poor presentation tool, but the author argues that the blame may lie more with the presenter than the tool. He explains how to add color and variety to PowerPoint slides with clip art and photos.

Podboy, Alvin. “Aligning Visions.”
Law Technology News 15(7):1, 30-31 (July 2008)

The author suggests a number of ways in which law librarians can improve their relationships with legal information vendors.

Schauer, Frederick. “Has Precedent Ever Really Mattered in the Supreme Court?”
Georgia State University Law Review 24:381-401 (Winter 2007)

Prof. Schauer concludes that precedent has rarely genuinely mattered in the Supreme Court, at least partly because its full opinions are so often for cases that made their way up to the Supreme Court precisely because they lacked clear precedent.

Schmidt, Justin M. “RFID and Privacy: Living in Perfect Harmony.”

RFID is an information-storage device that can be placed on a person, animal, or object. That information can be identified when the device reacts to radio waves. This note focuses on using private regulation and education, current privacy laws, and limited government oversight to address the potential privacy and security threats of RFID.

Sexton, Mary. “Preferably in English: Surfing the Pacific in Search of Law in Translation.”
Syracuse Journal of International Law and Commerce 35:275-290 (Spring 2008)

Finding English translations of the law of Asian countries can be challenging. This article discusses the problem and suggests some search options.

Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 32.1 permits citation of all nonprecedential opinions issued since the beginning of 2007. This article proposes that the next step for the federal courts is to expressly authorize nonprecedential opinions, establish uniform procedures for their issuance, and clearly establish their authoritative value.

To assist law students with evaluating legal websites, this article reviews selected free Internet sites containing primary and/or secondary sources of federal and state law.

Web pages with sexually explicit content intended for adult entertainment were used to test a variety of Internet content filters, and a random set of web pages with no sexual content was used to test the filters for overblocking. When the filters most effective at blocking adult materials were applied to search indexes or query results, the number of clean pages blocked in error exceeded the number of adult pages blocked correctly.

Note mention of our very own Bonnie Shucha’s reviews of PreCYdent on WisBlawg.

Judge Sykes reports that the new citation rule for unpublished opinions was invoked in under 1% of both cases and briefs during its first year of existence in the seventh circuit. She discusses why there has been so little use of the new rule.

This symposium issue includes articles by leading scholars on copyright infringement, fair use, moral rights, the doctrine of access, and naming rights.

To balance the protection of users’ privacy against the desire to allow access to possible evidence, the author proposes that search queries be protected by a federal qualified civil pre-trial discovery privilege.

Weyenberg, Michelle. “Best in Practical Training.”
National Jurist 17:26-29 (September 2008)

There continues to be an increasing demand for hands-on legal education. National Jurist ranked law schools based on clinical opportunities available, and the University of Wisconsin Law School tied for second in the ratings.

Whisner, Mary. “Unanswerable Questions.”
Law Library Journal 100:581-586 (Summer 2008)

This entry in Mary Whisner’s Practicing Reference column discusses a topic that we law librarians may prefer not to think about too much: the reference question that can’t be answered. Her true-life examples contain valuable tips for dealing with various manifestations of the unanswerable question.
