Recruiting the Next Generation of Librarians

My 4 year old niece Rhiannon came to stay with me and my husband for a few nights during the Thanksgiving holiday and I was very excited to show Rae where I worked. She understands that I work in a library. However, since I have adult friends and relatives who still do not fully comprehend what a law librarian is, I decided not to overwhelm Rae with details. But I know that she loves books. When she and her brother Bo come to our house, they say hello, fling off their coats and start assembling the toys they have at my house. The bookcase downstairs is full of children’s books and they usually head right for it.

Rae spent lots of time on Sunday and Monday taking the books and toys from room to room and then shelving them amongst my books in the bookcase upstairs. I was so excited that I might have a little librarian in the making! I couldn’t wait to show her my office! The parking garage immediately captured her attention, but not as much as pushing the elevator buttons. I cringed as I did it, but when we got to the library, I told her that we had to be quiet. I tried to explain it was because people were working and we didn’t want to get into trouble. However, my brother-in-law is a cop and so the kids equate getting into trouble with getting arrested, but funny thing—they still get into trouble.

I walked Rae through the bookshelves and showed her my office space with my computer and phone and pictures of her and her brothers Bo and Orion, but she was most impressed with spinning in my chair. Whee!!! I was feeling a bit glum that Rae wasn’t too interested in my library, but then again she is only 4. However, later that day we were in Woodman’s looking for corn dogs and when yelling “Corn dogs! Corn dogs!” didn’t work, Rae consulted her book and claimed to have found them. We did eventually locate these tasty treats (yuck!), but I don’t believe that it was via a grocery store map in Robinson Crusoe, but you never know, I guess. The kids did put away their toys before they left. However, I soon discovered that all of the children’s books were put away upstairs among my books. Books were out of order, backwards, upside down and some were (Continued on page 3) shoved back behind other books. The horror! At first, I was a bit upset, but then I thought, “Hmm, maybe Rae just didn’t like my classification scheme.”

So, as time goes by, we’ll see if I can recruit my niece into our fabulous profession. She loves to read, dresses very fashionably and likes to wear jewelry, which are qualities that I appreciate in many of my colleagues. Rae does like to skip pages in books sometimes, but I believe that she is developing her time-management skills. She is also used to taking orders, or should I say polite requests from her parents and rude requests from her brother. I do believe that Rae is on the librarian track.

This does make me wonder what our profession will be like in 20 years or so. I have no doubt that we will be highly relevant persons in our organizations. But, I wonder about print vs. online resources, subscription and records management, teaching legal research, Westlaw vs. Lexis and especially, how much will everything cost? Will escalating costs cause a backlash against online research? The more things change, the more they stay the same…maybe, maybe not? So, everyone keep your eyes open for a few good boys and girls/men and women to recruit into the field of law librarianship. We need to be prepared for whatever the future holds.

Happy wishes for a joyous holiday season and a happy, healthy and prosperous 2009!

Please Welcome Our New Members:

Joy Hopkins, student at UW-Eau Claire.

Jessie Miller has joined Cook & Franke S.C. as Librarian and Information Technology Specialist. She has spent more than 10 years in public library reference work in addition to support positions in law firms. She is excited to be joining the law library community and looking forward to the challenge of legal research and reference.

Melissa Schneider, Deputy Director and Head of Youth Services at the New Berlin Public Library. Melissa is interested in pursuing law librarianship and becoming a Law Librarian. She has enjoyed her experience working in the public library field, however, is looking for new opportunities as a librarian in a law firm.

Ellen Qualey is in her third year of law school at the UW-Madison, and began working on her MA in Library and Information Studies during the fall of 2008. Ellen works on the Library Services/Knowledge Management team at the Madison office of Quarles & Brady. She holds a BA from Beloit College and previously taught English as a Second Language in Japan.

Wisconsin Law Journal Names Unsung Heroes

Bonnie Shucha, University of Wisconsin Law Library, was selected as the 2008 winner of the Wisconsin Law Journal Unsung Heroes award in the Law Library Staff category. Other LLAW members nominated were Diane Duffey, Habush, Habush & Rottier, and Jane Moberg, Michael Best & Friedrich. The awards were presented at a luncheon at the Italian Community Center in Milwaukee on November 14, 2008.

The Wisconsin Law Journal recognizes award winners (pictured below) in seven other categories: Court Staff, Human Resources, Information Technology, Law Firm Administrators, Legal Secretaries, Paralegals, and Additional Unsung Heroes. Marilyn Booker, Milwaukee County District Attorney’s office, was also honored with a Lifetime Achievement award.

LexisWeb – Beta Version
Nancy E. Scibelli, Quarles & Brady

LexisWeb, currently in a Beta version, is a web search engine designed to locate legally relevant websites. LexisNexis editorial staff selects and validates the websites to be included in LexisWeb search results. This ensures only legally relevant websites are returned in search results.

Search results typically include federal, state, and local government agency websites, state and federal court websites, legal blogs, legal publication websites, law school and law firm websites, and online legal research websites such as FindLaw.com.

Currently, due to its Beta status, LexisWeb is available free of charge at www.lexisweb.com and is not integrated with Lexis.com.

In addition to limiting search results to legally relevant websites, LexisWeb contains value-added features. Examples include:

LexisNexis Recommended Sources. LexisWeb suggests resources related to search terms that are available on Lexis.com.

Capability to Narrow Search Results. LexisWeb permits users to further limit original search results by topic, subject, geography, citation, company, people, keyword, or source. The LexisNexis legal classification system is used to determine the categories available to narrow search results.

Detects Spelling Errors. LexisWeb detects misspelled search terms. Users are prompted with a "Did you mean" script to correct misspellings.

Predicts Search Phrases. LexisWeb predicts the user's search terms and prompts the user to select from a list of likely search phrases. The phrase prompt appears below the search box as the user types the search terms.

For more information see the LexisWeb user guide: http://www.lexisweb.com/LexisWebBetaUserGuide.pdf

A participant's remarks on the AALL Leadership Academy
Laura La Rose, Reinhart Boerner Van Deuren s.c.

On a beautiful autumn weekend in October, I had the privilege of attending the first annual AALL Leadership Academy. For two days we (35 law librarians) worked with Dr. Barbara Mackoff, a well-known psychologist and leadership educator to better understand our skills, strengths and talents and how they could be used to formulate our leadership style. Our learning began with an extensive reading list of articles about leadership as well as some personality tests. We then put these texts and tests to work as we learned about the eight key signatures of leadership –

Self Appraisal: identify and capitalize on your strengths
Inquiry: frame questions that drive solutions
Invention: nurture creativity and innovation
Connection: build your capacity to work with varied personalities and ages
Resilience: "Don't come back from Hell Empty-Handed" (See Dr. Mackoff's forthcoming book with this title)
Persuasion: increase your visibility and the value you bring to your organization
Intention: enhance your big picture thinking & decision mapping
Conviction: translate values into mission

To help us adopt the signatures, Dr. Mackoff provided a toolbox of frameworks, strategies and techniques. She encouraged us to identify what works with our personal style as well as challenged us to try techniques that might take some getting use to. In addition, AALL assigned each of us a mentor who has committed to spend the next year meeting with us on a regular basis to help us build our leadership skills.

I would highly recommend applying for the 2nd Annual Leadership Academy in 2009. I felt Dr. Mackoff and my fellow librarians provided valuable insights and leadership tools as well as broadened my professional network.
ILTA 2008: A Librarian’s Perspective
Mary Koshollek, Godfrey & Kahn, s.c.

In August, I had the pleasure of attending the 2008 International Legal Technology Association (ILTA) conference in Dallas, Texas with Godfrey & Kahn’s IT and Training departments. ILTA’s annual meeting, was attended by over 1500 IT and technology professionals primarily from law firms, but government agencies and private companies with sizeable legal departments also attended. The theme of the conference, “Global Perspective – Peer Advantage,” was borne out by the very diverse attendee list and schedule of presentations.

The librarians I met at ILTA agreed that the conference had several educational tracks of deep interest for our profession. Day one included a Knowledge Management concentration which included programs on starting a KM program, enterprise searching and using Wiki’s in law firms. Sharepoint was also a hot topic and programs ranged from hands on training to design ideas for a firm’s portal.

I attended several sessions which featured collaboration tools for law firms and learned that the legal field is very slow to adopt these technologies despite the growing significance in the private sector. Web 2.0 tools hold great promise as knowledge sharing devices, but a few speakers noted that they may be fraught with ethical risks. However, clients are adopting them in interesting ways and this may spur on their development in the legal field. One interesting aside was that Sun Microsystems now holds meetings in “Second Life” and has a policy that attendee avatars must be in human form!

For those of us in the records/conflicts field, the sessions on record management and loss prevention/conflicts were engaging. Firms of all sizes shared best practices for coping with e-mail, developing retention policies and dealing with lateral hires. Librarians were often mentioned (and highly regarded) as partners in the conflicts process for our ability to research and further flesh out conflicts information.

Apart from the educational opportunities, the vendor area was huge and varied. Lexis and Thomson/Reuters did have a presence but these were clearly over-shadowed by Interwoven and other software companies. Vendors also set up private viewing/demonstration rooms where you could try the latest versions of cutting edge products. The Godfrey & Kahn contingent took in a West KM demo with George May and learned more about the latest developments with this product, especially how it interacts with larger enterprise search tools.

Networking was facilitated by breakfasts / lunches organized by peer group. I attended breakfasts for the “Midwest” regional group and “Records” special interest groups. Both offered more opportunities to further share best practices and simply meet interesting people. Dallas also proved to be an exciting venue in August despite the daily temperature which hovered between 96-98 degrees. This posed only a minor inconvenience as most events took place at the resort which we nicknamed “the bio-dome” because attendees never really had to venture outside.

Next year’s conference will be in Washington DC. and plans are already underway for a spectacular event. This year’s meeting will be hard to top and I deeply appreciated the opportunity to attend and better understand firm operations through the eyes of allied departments. My thanks to Tom Dressel, IT Director and Kathy Schroeder, Training Manager- my ILTA companions - for helping this “newbie” get the fullest experience.
Law Libraries and the Great Wall of China
Kellee Selden-Huston, Davis & Kuelthau

What do law libraries and the Great Wall of China have in common? They combined for a great trip that included professional and cultural learning for a group of Special Libraries Association (SLA) members.

From October 12 to 24, 2008, fourteen delegates and four guests, led by SLA’s past president Rebecca Vargha, traveled to China for an exchange of library information. Our trip included stops in Beijing, Nanjing, and Shanghai. During these busy days, we met with other librarians and professional groups. We visited large modern public libraries, a library association, two corporate libraries, one legal institute, and several academic libraries.

Meetings lasted about two hours, a fairly standard length in the Chinese business culture. They were comprised of an hour discussing background information about the participant organizations, a question and answer session, and exchanging business cards and gifts. Afterwards, we toured the host library or institution. I gleaned something new from all of the sessions with our Chinese counterparts. The hosts were truly interested and excited to have us there, as we were excited to be visiting.

I was particularly interested in our visit to the Institute of Law, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences (CASS). The Institute originated as a reading room in 1956 and was formally established in October 1958 as part of the Chinese Academy of Sciences. In 1979, the Institute moved under the departmental umbrella of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences (CASS). CASS celebrated its 50th anniversary this year and is the oldest and largest institute of its kind in mainland China. The Institute has 116 staff members, comprised of four Professors for Life, 53 Professors, 34 Associate Professors, with the rest being staff and visiting or honorary Professors.

The focus of the Institute is split into three areas. The first is research in public, private, and social law. Second, the Institute provides legal education to nationals and foreigners, offering both masters and doctorate degrees in law. It also offers advanced educational programs for lawyers, judges, and government prosecutors. Third, the organization assists the state legislature and judicial bodies in the policy-making process. They produce three journals - two in Chinese and one in English.

The library focuses on collecting law books in several languages. Its collection of Russian legal materials is the largest in mainland China. Japanese and English materials also have a strong presence within the library. The librarians struggle with the right balance of what to purchase in these languages. As we know, law books are very expensive and it’s hard to know which are the most authoritative. Digital formats are not always available. Because space is also expensive, that contributes to the difficulty of purchasing decisions.

Legal studies are so popular in China that they are having a hard time deciding which books to purchase in all languages. CASS wants to improve and increase services to its patrons, but with a limited budget, finding authoritative titles can be daunting.

The Institute also struggles with copyright issues. In China, an author gives up their copyright when a publisher agrees to produce their article or book. Publishers divide the profits with the author, but it does not appear to be a set amount. Altered and illegal copies are common in China, in the legal as well as non-legal fields. It can be difficult to tell if the Institute is receiving original copies of materials.

As materials move from print to online, the Institute is trying to figure out who will be the keeper of the “last copy” of the print material. The Institute believes the government should create a system that would help determine this type of preservation. But there aren’t any guidelines yet. This makes it more difficult for them to decide what to keep and what to discard. The directors say electronic databases have not helped them solve this problem. CASS has access to Lexis and some other Chinese databases, but does not offer them by remote access. The oldest materials are from the Later Tang Dynasty which dates back to the seventh century. Ancient materials like these may not be in good enough condition to scan or change into digital format.

The tour portion of our visit included going to the archived collection. There we were allowed to handle books from various dynasties. The oldest materials are from the Ming and Xing Dynasties (17th—19th centuries). None of these materials are available in digital format. The books I handled were in great shape.

CASS hopes for more visiting scholars from academic libraries in the United States. I think our initial meeting opened the door to future exchanges with SLA librarians. Fostering this relationship would be helpful since most Chinese librarians do not receive any specialized training in special librarianship when earning their degrees. There are two main branches of library studies – public or academic.

I would highly recommend taking a professional trip that SLA might offer in the future to China or another country. These tours make you step outside the profession in the U.S. to see how other cultures handle their libraries. They create good relations with international professionals and offer a chance to network and have fun with fellow SLA members.

More on International Libraries...
Diane Duffey, Habush Habush & Rottier

On a trip to France in October, I took a picture of the Médiathèque in Orléans, the town I spent an academic year in back in 1993-1994.

The Médiathèque is a multimedia library. The French word for library is bibliothèque, but in the Information Age, as they’ve been adding different technologies, they’re starting to call many libraries médiathèques.

The Médiathèque d’Orléans opened in the spring of 1994, while I was living there (and its picture was printed, upside down, in the local magazine – the building’s appearance was criticized by some at the beginning already, so this didn’t help!)
Morris L. Cohen Student Essay Competition

The Legal History and Rare Books Special Interest Section of AALL, in cooperation with Gale Cengage Learning, announces the first annual Morris L. Cohen Student Essay Competition.

The purpose of the competition is to encourage scholarship in the areas of legal history, rare law books, and legal archives, and to expose students to AALL and law librarianship through their attendance at the Annual Meeting.

Eligibility

Currently enrolled students attending accredited graduate programs in library science, law, history, or related subjects are eligible to enter the competition. Students may be enrolled either full- or part-time. Members of AALL are eligible if they meet other eligibility requirements.

Requirements

Papers may be on any topic related to legal history, rare law books, or legal archives. Papers must be submitted by April 15, 2009. The winner will be announced by May 15.

Prize

The winner will receive a $500.00 prize from Gale Cengage Learning. In addition, the winner will receive up to $1000 to be applied towards expenses associated with attendance at the Annual Meeting of AALL. (Gale Cengage and the Legal History and Rare Books SIS will each contribute to the travel expenses).

Attendance at the AALL Annual Meeting is strongly encouraged, but not required. The 2009 Annual Meeting will be held July 25-28 in Washington, D.C. Winners will receive recognition at the Association-wide Awards Luncheon and at the Business Meeting of the Legal History and Rare Books SIS. Winners will also have the opportunity to present their paper at the Legal History and Rare Books SIS Roundtable or at a program during the Meeting.

Detailed procedures and an application form are available at the LHRB webpage: http://www.aallnet.org/sis/lhrb/

This article suggests that educational use, including fair use, has a price. It contends that fair use, educational exceptions, etc., establish a statutory regime of price discrimination for copyrighted works, defining and patrolling the boundary between educational and general markets.

This comment analyzes whether Google’s use of caching provides a fair use safe harbor for its Library Project and, if not, whether it should be exempt based on the Digital Millennium Copyright Act’s caching safe harbors provisions.

This note examines the history of copyright deferments, introduces the theory of givings, reviews competing positions regarding future copyright deferments, and recommends a givings-based approach to determining the length of protection the next time copyright expiration is deferred.

The author suggests a possible solution to the fair use-digital rights management debate by using one kind of game-theoretical model, known as the battle of the sexes.

Orphan works are writings, photos, movies, music, etc. whose owners can’t be located. Because registration, notice, and other formalities for copyright protection have been eliminated, the number of orphan works has increased dramatically. Potential users often have no way of knowing if a work is under copyright, or how to contact the copyright owner. The author discusses the situation and proposes a solution.

IV. President’s Report – Jamie Kroening

A. AALL in Portland was very enjoyable. The President attended an all-day leadership training program and will write a column regarding the Annual Meeting for publication in the LLAW Newsletter.

B. AALL is encouraging local chapters to use the AALLnet website for local information, including membership meeting calendars, so that chapters can share ideas. There is a task force that will be looking at redesigning the website.

C. The Wisconsin Law Journal’s Unsung Heroes judging is taking place. The winners will be announced at a November luncheon.

D. The President will update our chapter biography and profile on the AALL website in the next few weeks.

V. Committee Reports

A. Archives (Candace Hall Slaminski): Jamie Kroening reported that the Chair will be attempting to remove the stored archives boxes from Bev Butula’s basement. There are currently 11 boxes in storage plus a current archives box in Julia Jaet’s possession. The Chair is investigating scanning documents.

B. Grants (Maureen Burns): No report was provided, but a question was raised as to whether the name of the Professional Development Grant registration form should be changed to the “Annual Meeting Grant” registration form. The Board agreed that the grant is not limited to AALL attendance only and should remain the “Professional Development Grant.”

C. Membership (Marc Weinberger/Diane Duffey):

Currently there are:
- Active members: 68
- Associate members: 6
- Student members: 1
- Sustaining members: 3
- Total members: 78

The committee reports that a few associate members were gained in the process of restricting the listserv to members only. The committee will be attempting to contact approximately 20 members who have not renewed membership to determine whether membership is desired.

D. Newsletter (Julia Jaet/Bev Butula): The deadline for LLAW Newsletter submissions is September 2, 2008. Please send pictures and articles to Bev Butula. Nancy Scibelli will contribute a new column on Lexis/Westlaw enhancements. The committee plans to award a gift certificate prize to one member who writes an article. A $25.00 gift certificate will also be awarded to the winner of the contest to name the Newsletter.

E. Nominating (Carol Schmitt): The Chair will begin contacting people in April regarding nominations.

F. Program (Jill Bradshaw/Jim Mumm): The committee met in Portland at AALL and sketched out plans for the year. Our first membership meeting will be a tour of WisconsinEye. The remaining schedule is tentative at this point, but includes an idea involving judicial elections.

H. Web (Carol Hassler): The committee is looking for any new website ideas.

VI. Old Business

A. Calendar Project: Bev Butula reported that the calendar is completed and looks great but is on hold because we have received no confirmed sponsorship for the printing. The committee is seeking vendor sponsorship of each month since it will cost $600 to print 50 calendars. If all of the calendars sell, LLAW would make a profit. There is space on each month for two vendor logos. Hein expressed some interest in the back cover, but a commitment has not been confirmed. The Board discussed different sponsor types such as law firms and the Wisconsin Association for Legal Professionals, but there was some discussion as to our target market for the calendars. Susan O’Toole offered to make follow-up phone calls to those vendors who were contacted but have not responded. Carol Schmitt indicated that there was some interest from CCH, but the representative was looking for more details on the kind of space available. It was suggested that creating a mock-up for vendors to see might assist in obtaining sponsorship.

B. LLAW Closed Listserv: The listserv has been successfully closed to non-members as of September 1st. Non-paid members were eliminated from the listserv.

C. Membership Survey: Marc Weinberger is compiling and analyzing the results.

D. Meetings: At the last meeting, the Board discussed and tabled the idea of reducing the number of LLAW meetings per year. The Board agreed at the current meeting to continue meeting four times per year but to revisit the issue in the future if needed.

VII. New Business

2008-09 LLAW Budget review and approval: The 2008-09 LLAW Budget was circulated and discussed. Many budget amounts remained unchanged from last year. Archives requested $50.00 for costs associated with storage and scanning. The amount for the Board of Directors was reduced from $100.00 to $50.00 based on last year’s expenditures. Membership was increased from $50.00 to $70.00 to account for membership contests. Nominating was reduced from $75.00 to $50.00 based on last year’s expenditures. The Board decided to incorporate the line item for the Calendar into the Public Relations/Articles line, thereby increasing the Public Relations/Articles amount by $100.00. Carol Schmitt moved to approve the 2008-2009 LLAW Budget with changes; Susan O’Toole seconded the motion. All Board members agreed. No one opposed and no one abstained.

VIII. Other Announcements

A. UW SLIS new student dinner (Thursday, Aug. 28): The event will take place in Madison. Carol Schmitt will provide brochures from AALL for event attendees.

B. LLAW meeting September 18, 2008: As mentioned above, the next meeting will consist of a tour of the WisconsinEye studios.

IX. Adjournment

Carol Schmitt moved to adjourn the meeting at 12:45 p.m., and Marc Weinberger seconded the motion. The Board members unanimously agreed. No one opposed, and no one abstained.

IV. President’s Report – Jamie Kroening

A. The first Board meeting was held on August 21, 2008. The Board approved the 2008-2009 LLAW Budget.

B. The President has updated LLAW’s chapter biography on the AALL website.

C. Congratulations to Laura La Rose on her position in AALL leadership.

V. Committee Reports

A. Archives (Candace Hall Slaminski): The Chair will be reviewing the archives boxes currently stored with Bev Butula in order to make weeding and storage determinations.

B. Membership (Marc Weinberger/Diane Duffey):

Currently there are:
Active members: 75
Associate members: 6
Student members: 2
Sustaining members: 3
Total members: 86

Marc Weinberger attended the UW Library School orientation. Some students were interested in LLAW and took brochures.

C. Newsletter (Julia Jaet/Bev Butula): There will be a “name the newsletter” contest. Please e-mail Bev Butula with contest entries.

VI. Old Business

Calendar project: Bev Butula reported that the marketing calendar is complete and ready to be sold at $15.00 per calendar. A sign-up sheet for orders was circulated at the meeting. Bev will deliver when the calendars arrive. Payment is due on delivery.

VII. New Business

LLAW is going to write a letter to the State Bar requesting a discount for librarians and including a comment on expenses. This is prompted by the State Bar’s policy that only members receive a discount on books; the discount is tied to State Bar membership.

VIII. Adjournment

Laura La Rose moved to adjourn the meeting at 7:24 p.m., and Amy Thornton seconded the motion. The members unanimously agreed. No one opposed, and no one abstained.

The Business meeting was preceded by a behind the scenes look at WisconsinEye, the only privately-funded public affairs network in the nation. Members received a very interesting tour of the studios and production facilities.
